

Privacy Without Walls

Finding the right balance between focus and connection.

The open-vs.-closed office debate is officially over.

Today's employees need both. They want access to teammates, natural light, and collaboration. They also need fewer distractions, better focus, and space to think.

In fact, Steelcase research found that privacy is employees' #1 workplace need. The same research found that 69% of middle managers don't have access to the privacy they need at work.

The goal isn't to close people off – it's to give them more choice and control over how they work.

The New Privacy Equation

But privacy doesn't have to mean more walls. The most successful workplaces today aren't built around separation—they're built around balance.

That's where layered privacy comes in.

Instead of relying on a single solution, designers are creating workplaces that support both collaboration and concentration.

Privacy, Reimagined

At AMQ, we believe privacy should work harder.

That's why we're introducing new solutions that make it easier to create the right balance between focus and connection.

Tektis Frameless Glass brings clean sightlines, daylight, and visual openness to the workplace, with clear and frosted options that help define space without closing it off.

New 3F Privacy Screen shapes and colors add another layer of flexibility, making it easier to create focus zones, reduce distractions, and add personality to a space.

Different solutions. Same goal.

Together, they help people stay connected when they want to collaborate and focused when they need to do their best work.

Because the future of workplace privacy isn't about building more walls. It's about creating better choices.

Discover how Tektis Frameless Glass and 3F Privacy Screens can help you create the right balance of focus, privacy, and connection.

